Excerpt: . . . ample supply of sand and to assure its delivery to the foundry without fear of interruption on account of the weather. Incidentally, a very material saving over storage outdoors is anticipated. The furnaces are charged from automatic elevators. In case of any trouble with these elevators, the charging materials can be elevated to the charging room by the cranes in the storage yard alongside of the foundry. The toilet rooms are separated from the wash rooms, and both are plentifully distributed throughout all the buildings. Particularly noticeable throughout the works is the large number of cranes, particularly jib cranes, it being recognized that lack of transportation facilities often means the enforced idleness of labor. The forge shop, approximately 300 feet long by 80 feet wide, is now being equipped with furnaces and forging machines. This equipment includes one 350-ton and one 1000-ton steam hydraulic press, a 1500-pound hammer, four annealing furnaces, hand forges, case hardening and tool dressing appliances. Machine And Erecting Shops Decidedly the most imposing looking structure at present erected is the combination of the two machine shops and the erecting shop. The machine shops, each approximately 750 feet long by 135 feet wide, are located parallel to each other and spaced about 85 feet apart. They are joined at their western extremities by the erecting shop, which is approximately 550 feet long and 135 feet wide, and set at an angle of 45 degrees with the others. The three buildings together...
