The statement is a photograph of the business and, if not correctly viewed, the whole complexion of the risk is altered and the possibilities of use defeated. The financial statement assumes an important place in modern management. Executives, officers, and directors of corporations should be able to make an actual analysis of the financial statement of their business if they are to plan constructively and wisely. Investors are able to buy securities on a more scientific basis when they are able to view the exact conditions and contingencies of a business as shown in its statements. Credit men make daily use of statements. While it is time in granting credit, whether in the form of loans or merchandise, that the personal equation and the knowledge of the debt-paying record of the subject are important features, the story told by the financial statement is the fundamental basis upon which credit is granted. Accountants, of course, are interested in the accounting science and the technique involved in the preparation of statements, as well as in the use they serve. The exact purpose of the analysis differs somewhat with these classes. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
