Excerpt: .A cup, then, to our making up.--Sit down--A pledge for concord, friends, --the health of him Whose banner is our country's sun, that shall Disperse the night which overclouds her now-- Alfred! - -I pray you, Edwy, sing those rhymes You've strung for us, and we so love to hear. Edixy. Right willingly; tho' homely be the verse I dare be sworn was never more rich in heart. Edwy sings. When circling round the festive board The cup is filled the highest, And one and all their love record For him their thoughts then nighest--Who owns the name their lips pronounce, While vouching tear-drops spring, Sirs, In eyes he does not see?--At once I'll tell you--here's-- THE KING, Sirs! When proud in arms the nation stood To front the foul invader, And England did what England could, And fate alone...
